Severe weather across the UK today

2 March 2005

Disruption on the transport networks across parts of England is already evident and more poor weather conditions, including snow and ice, are expected through the next 36 hours.

The Met Office is continuing to issue warnings of severe weather for the affected areas. If you're thinking of travelling, the advice is to check the latest weather forecast and warnings from Met Office and also travel updates via the web and local media.
